Essential reading on China's increased commercial relations with Latin AmericaBy richard l bernalEssential reading for anyone interested in the impact of China's increased commercial relations with Latin America and the challenges for the Chinese as the relationship evolves. Prof. Ellis presents a comprehensive amount of data on the region including coverage of the Caribbean. Part I provides an insightful overview of what has been happening. In Part II he examines the critical challenges confronting Chinese companies in their operations and their quest for projects, mergers and acquisitions. He also points out that the expansion and transformation of the relationship has implications for Chinese ethnic communities long resident in the region.Richard L. Bernal, author of Dragon in the Caribbean

An analysis of the new physical presence of Chinese companies operating in Latin America and the Caribbean, the associated challenges that they face, and how they are impacting the region and its relationship with the PRC.

"No other analyst has a better grasp of the growing role China plays in Latin America than Evan Ellis. This book is another contribution to our understanding of this complex and shifting relationship. A must read.' - Moises Naim, Senior Associate, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and author of The End of Power, USA 'Evan's book breaks important new ground by comprehensively analyzing a new stage which has followed the boom in bilateral trade: the recent sudden rise in the physical presence of the PRC firms in the region and the opportunities and risks that this presents for China, host Latin American countries, and third parties like the U.S.' - Robert Devlin, Johns Hopkins School for Advanced International Studies (SAIS), USA "Evan has been arguably the most knowledgeable source on China's growing presence in Latin America for over a decade. His new work takes the current understanding of this trend to a whole new level. No account of Latin America's economic prospects or of hemispheric relations can afford to ignore this stupendous piece of scholarship.' - Kevin Casas-Zamora, Secretary for Political Affairs, Organization of American States; Non-Resident Senior Fellow, Latin America Initiative, Brookings Institution, USA 'The most prolific scholar of PRC-LAC relations has provided a sophisticated and meticulously researched study on Beijing's physical presence in the Latin America and the Caribbean. Ellis brilliantly examines the challenges and opportunities presented by the expansion of Chinese companies throughout the region. A one of a kind contribution to the field of PRC-LAC relations.' - Frank O. Mora, Director, Latin American and Caribbean Center, Florida International University, USAAbout the AuthorProfessor of National Security Studies at the United States Army War College, Carlisle, PA, USA
