From Routledge : China's Evolving Industrial Policies and Economic Restructuring (China Policy Series) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised China's Evolving Industrial Policies and Economic Restructuring (China Policy Series):

In the past three decades, China has successfully transformed itself from an extremely poor economy to the world's second largest economy. The country's phenomenal economic growth has been sustained primarily by its rapid and continuous industrialisation. Currently industry accounts for nearly two-fifths of China's gross domestic product, and since 2009 China has been the world's largest exporter of manufactured products. This book explores the question of how far this industrial growth has been the product of government policies. It discusses how government policies and their priorities have developed and evolved, examines how industrial policies are linked to policies in other areas, such as trade, technology and regional development, and assesses how new policy initiatives are encouraging China's increasing success in new technology-intensive industries. It also demonstrates how China's industrial policies are linked to development of industrial clusters and regions.

"Combining both sectoral and regional perspectives, this book is a well-organized, important contribution to the studies of China's economic policies. It provides valuable insights for scholars and policy makers to comprehend the evolving nature of China's industrial policies." Chen Li, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong, SAR, China. Pacific Affairs (Volume 89, 2016) About the Author China's recent phenomenal economic growth has been sustained primarily by China's rapid and continuous industrialisation.
