Developing the Leader Within You by John C. Maxwell To the point, direct, with questions that probe, inspire introspection, and cause personal identification of strengths, weaknesses, and character. I found myself highlighting good material throughout. The style is inviting, while deceptively hard-hitting. Not necessarily a page turner in the beginning, but it picked up a solid head of steam towards the end. The book feels open-ended, and expectedly so, considering the breadth of literature penned by the author. There is more than a smattering of others' quotes;

work/quotes; were it not for the established integrity and success of Maxwell, I'd be more inclined to think of their inclusion as filler vs applied life lessons or manuscripts of personal fondness. A great resource for individuals and organizations to adopt greater leadership principles in a systemic way. I look forward to bringing this to my focus/men's bible study group, and seeing the response it generates. A solid four stars. Daniel H. Osborne

I am going through this book with a Church Leadership Coach, and we are also using with that leadership coach in our Church. We've found the book helpful on a couple of fronts: The description of the levels of Leadership has helped us as a Church to understand what it takes to build into people, to develop them and help them influence those around them. The ideas surrounding prioritization has really helped because it has forced the elders and the leadership board of my Church to see what my roles and tasks really are, and where I need to focus on so that they can lead well and we can impact our community. We do find though that the book rests too much on older examples, and doesn't do the job it could do in translating to the 21st century. It is a bit dated and it shows.

Excellent resource for any congregation that is trying to rebuild and gain new members. My husband and I are part of the Transition team at our church, looking for a new Pastor. Our previous Pastor retired and the congregation began to shrink dramatically. Within a few months of dedicated work, we have noticed a great renewal of membership. A must have for any faith.
