For many people today, the notion of success is now set against a range of other wants and desires which are not necessarily to do with having a large bank account or sports car. Instead, work needs to form part of what makes us happy. This book is about making people more successful and happy, by getting them to think differently. Packed with real-life experiences, case studies, anecdotes and stories, James Banting provides 101 advice and tips to redesign parts of your life in order to get a life. This includes using technology to get ahead of the curve, learning from failure, delegating, how to say "No", evaluating people differently, and ultimately, how to become self-sufficient. For those who find climbing the career ladder is not the one and only goal in their life, this book will be an inspiration to an alternative, balanced life.
