..."Volumes A and B are simultaneously published, in advance of volume C, and already form a self-contained textbook for a one-year course."... -- Journal of Econometric Literature... Volume C of a graduate level macroeconomics textbook is devoted to inflation dynamics business fluctuations, and macroeconomic policies. -- Journal of Economic Literature

About the Author As a pediatrician, writer, wife, and mother, Perri Klass has demonstrated how medicine is integral to the health of families and communities, and how doctors themselves struggle to balance the conflicting needs of profession, self, and family. As medical director of Reach Out and Read, she encourages other pediatricians to foster pre-reading skills in their young patients. While earning her M.D. at Harvard, Klass contributed articles to "Mademoiselle" and "The New York Times" as well as to scientific and medical journals. She also wrote her first book, "A Not Entirely Benign Procedure "(1987), which chronicles her introduction to medicine and motherhood. In the following years she has continued to publish books, essays, award-winning short stories, a novel, and numerous articles, ranging from professional papers to popular journalism and travel pieces.
