Robert Chambers : Participatory Workshops: A Sourcebook of 21 Sets of Ideas and Activities before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Participatory Workshops: A Sourcebook of 21 Sets of Ideas and Activities:

4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. A Handful or Two of Good Ideas By B. Hepp This book was recommended in another book on facilitation. I did find several good ideas, and have since used some of those with good results. Like another reviewer here, I found the comments about what not to do and mistakes to avoid helpful. But I had hoped for more. Like other reviews I've read elsewhere, I found the 21 list framework a bit gimmicky and distracting. Overall, it was worth the price, though better books may be out there (but I still haven't found what I'm looking for ... at least in newer books). I have found a few older books, like "How to Make Meetings Work" and "Joining Together" just as helpful. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. The best of its kind. By Steven Leighton An excellent handbook for anyone who wants to help people get involved and empowered. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. just ok By Ruby and Cody underwhelmed by the exercises included. it's just ok. if i had seen this in a bookstore, and had the chance to flip through it, i wouldn't have bought it.

This sourcebook is for all who work with others on participatory learning and change. Written in a spirit of critical reflection and serious fun, it provides 21 sets of ideas and options for facilitators, trainers, teachers and presenters, and anyone who organises and manages workshops, courses, classes and other events for sharing and learning ideas. It covers topics such as getting started, seating arrangements, forming groups, managing large numbers, helping each other learn, analysis and feedback, dealing with dominators, evaluation and ending, coping with horrors, and common mistakes.

'A lovely book.' Training Journal 'Excellent ideas, clear and concise.' Shari Howe, Training Specialist, Center for Field Assistance and Applied Research 'Next time you start designing a training programme for a community, take a look at this book first.' TerraGreen 'This delightful little book is...a smorgasbord of very practical activities combined with some lessons from experience for facilitators of participatory workshops.' Janet Hunt, Development Studies Bulletin 'Packed with ideas, many of which you will want to return to over time...this book should be on every teacher or facilitator's bookshelf.' walnutbooks.com 'One word of warning: don't lend this book to a colleague; you'll not see it again.' International Association for Impact Assessment 'The collection is well-organised and very well-written.' British Journal of Educational Technology About the Author Robert Chambers' other books include Rural Development: Putting the Last First (1983), Challenging the Professions (1993) and Whose Reality Counts? Putting the First Last (1997).
