Maurya Wickstrom : Performing Consumers: Global Capital and its Theatrical Seductions before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Performing Consumers: Global Capital and its Theatrical Seductions:

4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Fascinating...By J. Tackett If you are at all interested in corporate america's devilish intentions...towards you and your children...you should read this book. However, if YOU are one of the corporate marketers that the author describes...you should buy every copy of this book and subsequently burn them...lest your devious designs be brought into the light.

Performing Consumers is an exploration of the way in which brands insinuate themselves into the lives of ordinary people who encounter them at branded superstores. Looking at our performative desire to "try on" otherness, Maurya Wickstrom employs five American brandscapes to serve as case studies: Ralph Lauren; Niketown; American Girl Place; Disney store and The Lion King; and The Forum Shops at Caesars' Palace in Las Vegas. In this post-product era, each builds for the performer/consumer an intensely pleasurable, somatic experience of merging into the brand and reappearing as the brand, or the brand's fictional meanings. To understand this embodiment as the way that capital is producing subjectivity as an aspect of itself, Wickstrom casts a wide net, drawing on: the history of capital's relationship with theatre-political developments in the United States; recent work in political science, philosophy, and performance studies. An adventurous study of theatrical indeterminacy and material culture, Performing Consumers brilliantly takes corporate culture to task.
